Cary Umhau is the author of Burning Down the Fireproof Hotel, part spiritual memoir, part manifesto for living a more spacious life. She's a storyteller who encourages people to demolish "us and them" paradigms, as she tells how God moved in her life.

Cary has lived in Washington, D.C. for 30 years and is the founder of SPACIOUS, a community organization that conspires to turn strangers into neighbors by living out the gospel in creative ways. Her work and writing have been featured in PBS' Nightly Business Report, BBC World News, Huffington Post, The Washington Post, and other outlets. She's the mother of three adult children and has three granddaughters. She loves road trips and tourists.

Cary will have books for sale at the retreat. Her book is also available online in hardcopy, Kindle or audio.

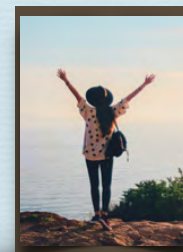

RETREAT

We are called to love the Lord our God with everything we have – heart, soul, mind, strength. And to love our neighbors as ourselves. It sounds so simple, though few would say it is easy.

During the retreat, we will

- Answer the question: How do our lives look when we align our beliefs with the abundant life that Jesus promises?
- Explore how to orient our daily lives around what Jesus promises.
- Consider what our culture encourages us to settle for and why it will always be inferior to God's gifts.
- Embrace the hope that Jesus offers.
- Go home with a strategy for living "immeasurably more."

Psalm 16: "You make known to me the path of life; you fill me with joy in your presence, with eternal pleasures at your right hand."
