2018 GUATEMALA MISSION TRIP

That is not an error - we did say 2018!

The Mission Team has decided that John Knox is not ready for a trip to Guatemala in 2017. We have not had a great response from you, the congregation, as we look for Team Members. However...we do hear many voices saying that 2018 will be the year.

That is fantastic! Let's start planning now for a really big, really exciting, really powerful experience in Cobán next summer. There will be many activities to participate in—stuff for Granma & Granpa, for you strong men & you energetic women, and for you Youth—you guys will be able to see a whole new world-view - and have a pile offun too....like hiking to waterfalls and visiting caves, and hearing monkeyshow! and see volcanoes spout smoke and pick coffee beans and avocados and build buildings... and on and on! So ...keep you eyes pealed for breaking news of GMT2018!

COMING ATTRACTION ~

Young at Hearts (YAHs) and FRIENDS

Historic Pinckney House

Our next adventure will be a van trip to Pendleton, SC, on May 16 to tour the historic summer home of Charles Coatsworth Pinckney built before 1830. This residence was the summer retreat from hot summer days and the plague of malaria brought on in the low country by mosquitoes. The house is fully furnished and has expansive porches, oversized windows, and doors and high ceilings reflecting the architecture of a Caribbean plantation house designed for coolness.

In addition, there is a reproduction carriage house with period vehicles; a one-room log cabin of the era, and a slave/tenant farm house - lots to explore and lots of history to learn from our guide provided by the Pendleton Historic Foundation. Lunch will follow at a lovely Pendleton eatery.

DATE: TUESDAY MAY 16

TIME: 10:00 AM (sharp!) board the van in front of the church

COST: $6.00 for the tour and additional for lunch

RESERVATIONS: PLEASE... Bessie 233-5518; LaRue 675-6172

A Powerful Easter Reminder

By: Erin Mehagan

On Easter Sunday, we celebrated our resurrected Savior, His defeat over death and rejoiced in this good news. Adding to the sacredness of this holy occasion for me: Piper wore a dress originally made for me by my grandmother. Livi started this Easter family tradition in 2013, Elle continued it in 2015 and this year was Piper's turn.

My grandma was a tremendous part of my life before she passed away when I was 11 years-old, and seeing my girls with a physical piece of her leaves me in an emotional puddle. When I look at them in this dress, I see my grandma standing in a store looking through piles of fabric until she found the perfect one. I see her taking my little measurements to make sure it would fit, sitting at her sewing machine stitching each piece together, adding lace to the collar and sleeves, a bow to the front, until it was all just right. Her time, her hands, and her heart are all over this dress.

It's undeniably powerful that this real, touchable connection to someone so important to me who has passed away, comes to life on Easter Sunday. The day that God promises to us that death does not have the final word. That my goodbye to my grandma 23 years ago was not a goodbye at all – but a mere see you later. Eternal life awaits those who believe and there will one day be a reunion between me and my grandmother. That is incredibly awesome in every sense.

I am infinitely humbled by the sacrifice Jesus made for me and deeply grateful for this powerful reminder of the gift of eternal life – a reminder that, of all places, came in the form of a dress for a little girl. May we all open our eyes to the gifts and reminders God sends to each of us in the moments we need them most.

This is an excerpt from a family blog Erin maintains that documents and recounts her hectic family life. You can read more at www.blogspot.mehagan.com.
